Sunesta

East End Awning

HERE'S TO A SQUINT-FREE SUMMER!

Here's to a glorious summer under the shade of a Sunesta awning from East End Awning. It's going to be hot. The sun is going to be strong. Even with sunscreen and sunglasses you'll need extra protection.

Starting our 8th season at East End Awning, we offer a large selection of strong, water-repellent awnings available in over 200 beautiful colors and patterns. Sunesta awnings have no ugly confining braces or upright poles and they retract easily either manually or with the push of a button with an optional motor.

They'll shield you from the brutal sun, provide soothing, cooling shade and beautify your home, all at the same time. (And maybe prevent a few wrinkles, too.)

HAMI

The Semi-Annual Stockholders Meeting Of HMansions, Inc.

By Dan Rattiner

The annual stockholders meeting of Hamptons Mansions, Inc. (HAMI — Nasdaq) was held at the Plaza Hotel in Manhattan last week. The event was somewhat strained as the newly appointed president, Albert Weeks, tried to explain the fall in the price of the stock from last year to this, what the board is doing about it and where they go from here. HAMI was trading at 46 1/2 just one year ago, down from a high of 53 the year before, and at the end of this year it was trading at just 31 1/4.

Mr. Weeks, who took over the company in November, however, was upbeat in his presentation. He pointed out that though real estate sales in the Hamptons had declined from $1.82 billion in 2000 to just $1.4 billion in 2001, this was still far ahead of the revenue for 1999, when just $1.25 billion in sales was made.

"We are going through a recession," Weeks said, "but things are looking up. The numbers for the fourth quarter actually show an increase in volume in our East Hampton Village subsidiary. Furthermore, the average price of a home in East Hampton increased 90.9%, from $1.76 million per house to $3.36 million per house. We think that our East Hampton subsidiary is going to start a recovery that will spread all over the Hamptons."

Weeks was absolutely gushing about East Hampton Village.

"If there was one area where Wall Street money was routed into Hamptons real estate after the stock market slide, East Hampton Village was it," he said, repeating word for word a comment made by Cook Pony Farm vice president Judi Desiderio.

Township of Brookhaven for the purchase of Eastport, which HAMI is selling and which, he said, "has not lived up to expectations." He also said the Hamptons were in negotiations with the North Fork to take over at least some of the North Fork operations, including Mattituck, Cutchogue, Aquebogue, Southold and New Suffolk as well as about three-quarters of the North Fork wineries.

"If we can conclude these negotiations," he said, "we might have a lock on the entire East End.

Whenever somebody wants to buy a house, they will have to deal with a salesperson from HAMI."

Weeks lamented the inability of the departing president, Melvin Gas, to get the Ira Rennert mansion completed and open by July of last year. This had been a big disappointment to the company, he said, since the Rennert mansion in Sagaponack, at 108,000 square feet on 56 ocean-front acres, would be the biggest private estate in the country.

"This would have had a huge impact on future real estate sales," he said. "But we could not get it open and there is some question about whether we are going to

"We are going to lay off 13,500 residents... We are going to do this by attrition, retirement and just plain sneaking up behind people and bopping them on the head."

When asked about other measures the company was taking to bolster up the bottom line, he noted that HAMI is in intense negotiations with the

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

The general consensus up until now was that East Hampton's Ron Perelman was the richest man in New York. Now the honor is going to His Honor, the Mayor, whose net worth is about $7.5 billion give or take a penny or two, according to Worth magazine. Last September, when he was running for office, we ran into Mike Bloomberg at the Hampton Classic Horse Show and suggested we interview him for Dan's, but he declined, saying he wasn't a true Hamptomite. Yet.

Julie Andrews, long-time friend and supporter of the Bay Street Theatre has been appointed to its Board of Trustees along with Steven Kossak.
 Julie has performed at several special benefit evenings for Bay Street and has co-hosted the Theatre's annual Summer Gala. Her daughter
Emma Walton Hamilton, is a founder and Co-
 Artistic Director of Bay Street.

Just as we managed to collect all nine of the outrageously popular Chrome Nail Makeup colors
 Del Labs' Dan Wassong has done it again! Del's Sally Hansen line has introduced new nail, hand and lip products that are unquestionably in vogue.

The John Drew Theater's artistic director Josh Gladstone is following up on last year's acclaimed production of Romeo and Juliet with a staging of Macbeth every weekend from March 8 to March 24.. The production features several professional actors including Kameron Steele in the title role and Kathryn Mueth as Lady Macbeth. Ivana Catanese, Randy Lee Hendler and Maria Pessino will play the three witches. Tickets are $15 for adults, $10 for students and seniors; they are available at Guild Hall's East Hampton box office (631-324-4050).

The apple (in this case let's say the... rose) does not fall far from the tree. All you hear about lately is the going-owns of the very eye-catching Paris and Nicky Hilton. Their very stunning mom is Kathy Hilton, wife of Ricky Hilton of Southampton and she is making news on her own.
 Certainly not having to work for a living, she owned a very hot and fashionable boutique in LA six years ago named the Staircase. Her shop displayed her great taste in just what to give that special person who had everything...not a hard thing to do for someone in her circumstance. Clientele included
Rod Stewart, Bruce Springsteen, Candy
 Spelling, Roger Moore and Delta Burke. Now we get to see and even afford what she is selling and of all places on QVC. On Monday, the debut of "Many Splendid Things" hosted by Kathy offered an assortment of items that only she could offer.
 Where else could you buy a box that is covered in the same fabric from the walls of a private home that John and Jackie Kennedy honeymooned?

Neal Travis doesn't mind telling on his neigh-

Botox

Are You Angry? Yes? No? I Should Know? Of Course I Know, I Was Testing

By Dan Rattiner

I have very bad news for men. Last week, the Food and Drug Administration announced they are going to give official approval for a new form of Botox that can prevent a woman from appearing angry. Using very tiny needles, it is injected just above the eyebrows. No more scowl lines. The effect lasts a week. Then you have another treatment.

Famous actresses, about seventy percent of them according to some sources, go through this treatment every three weeks out in Hollywood. Many socialites and New York matrons also get them. It's just something you have to do if you want to stay beautiful.

The announcement was in the news because, until now, doctors who administer Botox have done so only after patients sign papers relieving them of responsibility. The shots have been considered experimental.

The approval of the Food and Drug Administration means that now anybody can go out and have a doctor administer these shots. The FDA considers them safe, even though the new form of Botox is not that much different from the old. The result is expected to be sensational. Soon, as New York Times reporter Alex Kuczynski put it, their lives. Now they can say this, and their men will look in their eyes searchingly and they will have no choice but to agree. Everything looks just fine. There's not even a hint of a clue.

be able to get it open by the spring of 2002. I knew coming in that this was a problem area. I did not know it was a BIG problem area. But what's done is done."

Gas was let go by the board in October, pushed out with a golden parachute of $246 million, a ten-bedroom house on three acres in Sagaponack and a new Land Rover, according to the Wall Street Journal. Weeks was hired in December. It was also announced in December that Melvin Gas had taken the job of president of Myrtle Beach, Ltd., a new company recently formed for the overdeveloped area along the Virginia shore.

"I see great things for our future," Weeks said about HAMI. "We have improved our infrastructure with a massive road reconstruction project that took most of last year — but caused no greater number of fatalities on our highways than the year before — and we have lured a whole new group of celebrities to the Hamptons, including Mel Brooks, Jerry Seinfeld and Ross Perot. And we are even working on George Dubyah," he said to much laughter.

Weeks said that this year the company is going to embark on a major push to put all telephone wires underground, is negotiating with some new celebrities — notably Madonna and Britney Spears, who know one another, according to Weeks — and Mel Gibson to move out to the Hamptons.

The number of sales for all of 2001 was indeed down 40%, and that was not good, Weeks said, mentioning once again his predecessor who, he said, "watched Rome burn while Galileo fiddled"

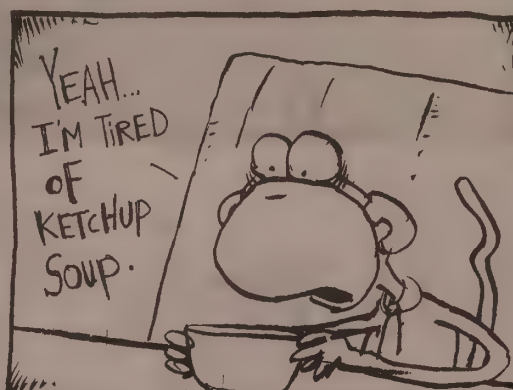

(sic). But this was mitigated by the overall size of each sale, which was actually up, bringing the total revenue difference to just 24% down, meaning that, per sale, HAMI could make more revenue with less labor.

"As a result," he said to the stockholders, "we are going to lay off 13,500 residents of the Hamptons, bringing the total in the Hampton Mansions company down to just 108,325. "We are going to do this by attrition, retirement and just plain sneaking up behind people and bopping them on the head," he said. "And one result, besides lower labor costs (applause), will be that the Hamptons will fall below the magic number of 110,000, the number of residents required by New York State for an area to form its own county. Having this new county, which many people are pressing for, will, your company believes, just bring in more paper pushers and bureaucrats and will be a hindrance to profitability in the future. This reduces that possibility altogether."

Weeks was warmly applauded at the end of his speech, except for one heckler who yelled, "you bum you," and he left the stage leaving the stockholders who had complained of lighter wallets, in an upbeat mood, at least, until the next stockholders' meeting in the fall.

Smells And Noises

Manure, Rotting Shellfish, Goats, Cows, Ropes On Aluminum Masts And The Ocean Surf

By Dan Rattiner

I was sitting in our living room the other day when for some reason I noticed the unmistakable smell of hay and horses. Where could it be coming from? It was a nice smell. It reminded me of the smell at the Hampton Classic Horse Show I go to every August up on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton. But here it was over on Three Mile Harbor Road overlooking the harbor, where our house is frequently filled with the smell of saltwater, fogs and decomposing sea life.

I looked out the window. Down below, on the road, there was a horse trailer pulled off to one side, the driver apparently stopped there for awhile to admire the view of the harbor. He was getting some of ours, we were getting some of his.

This is not to say that the smell of barnyard animals is anything unusual on Three Mile Harbor Road.

It is, perhaps, unusual on our stretch of the road running parallel to the boats in the harbor, but driving home from Bridgehampton and coming up Three Mile Harbor Road I pass many homes that have horses and chickens running around. There is one stretch that is now a farm, Oakdale Farm — before 1980 it was an empty field — where there are two yaks in an enclosed pen, right by the road. At least I thought they were yaks. They have very long horns and considerable coats thick enough for you to brush — potatoes just south of Wickabogue Road in Southampton Village. You can go to the docks in Hampton Bays or Montauk and you will get a nose full of the smell of fresh fish.

Potatoes, horses, cows, fish and lobsters are what the East End is all about, and if you choose to live here, you have to share the space.

I bring this up because of the latest twist in what is surely nothing more than the harassment of Gines Serran-Pagan, a Southampton Village resident who, five years ago, bought a former farm on North Main Street and has proceeded to restore it. In restoring it he brought in farm animals. And this was fine until a new mayor, Joe Romanosky, whose father-in-law lives next door, was elected three years ago. The father-in-law does not like the smell of the farm animals. He also does not like the sound that they make. And when his son-in-law the mayor tried using and they have their own special smell. Yak smell. Recently, I was told they are Texas Longhorns.

The East End, by any accounting, is a full-blown rural area. You can be attacked by the smell of existing laws to force the farm animals out and failed, the mayor passed new laws prohibiting farm animals in the village unless he, the mayor, approves of them

by permit and unless they are on a piece of property larger than the one owned by Serran-Pagan. Furthermore, the mayor's farm animal permission permit is good only for one year and has to be renewed by him. Also, no existing farm animals can be grandfathered in. If you have a goat or a duck or a chicken, it has to go into hiding before you can apply.

This amazing law, one certainly of dubious constitutionality, went into effect last November. Serran-Pagan removed his animals, temporarily, to a friend's farm in another jurisdiction. He now must jump through the hoops of this law to get his animals back. Or wait several years while a civil rights lawsuit he has pending goes through the court system. Or wait still more years while the dubious constitutionality of this new law is ruled upon. Last week, another immediate neighbor of Serran-Pagan leased to the farmer enough property so Serran-Pagan would exceed the minimum in order to make the application. This week, Serran-Pagan filed, or tried to file, papers asking for the farm animal license. Here's how it went.

What do you do if you are the mayor of a village in a rural area where the sounds and smells of farm animals are common and a man whose property you decreed was too small to make the application suddenly has enough land to do so?

Well, first of all, you say that even if he now has enough land to qualify, he doesn't. A reporter for The New York Times asked an official who works for the mayor about this.

"Leased land is unacceptable," the official said. (This appeared in the Times on Sunday, February 17, in the Long Island section.)

Well, that leaves out about half the farmers on the East End, which is probably the number who have sold major parts of their farms to wealthy neighbors and then leased them back at low cost to farm them. In other words, about half the farmers in town, lacking ownership of their leased land, do not have the right to be allowed to have farm animals there. So who are you going to ask to apply for the permit? Ron Lauder? Christie Brinkley? Both of them own land being farmed.

Of course, the mayor is in a damned if you do, damned if you don't place here. If he denies Serran-Pagan his permit, but allows other leaseholders to continue, he will simply be adding to the cost of the settlement the Southampton Village residents will have to pay in the civil rights lawsuit Serran-Pagan will surely win. If he approves Serran-Pagan's application, he will incur the wrath of his father-in-law who, at least one immediate neighbor of Serran-Pagan — other than the one who is leasing the property to him — told me is who the mayor is afraid of.

I should point out, by the way, that in addition to the smell that farm animals give off, it is true that they also make noises. Horses whinny, goats bleat, chickens cluck, even guinea hens, which are running around on a small property elsewhere in the village alongside the Southampton Bypass (and which are not bothering the mayor's father-in-law), often make a racket when in a flock. Also making noise are the nylon mainsheets, which bang against the aluminum masts aboard sailboats tied up in front of my house, the crashing surf in front of the oceanfront homes in the Village of Southampton and the farm tractors that plow the field south of Wickabogue. No one complains about these.

But the mayor has many forces at his command in his battle against Serran-Pagan. He has the police department officers, the health department officials, the zoning department officials and even the local fire department and ambulance people if he wishes to get them going against Mr. Serran-Pagan.

And of course, he has his first line of defense, the real twist in this story this week, which is his failure to have printed any application forms for the farm animal licenses. This new law was passed in September, over many of the townspeople's objections, to go into effect in sixty days, which it did. This is now February. Between September and February, almost half a year, the Village Clerk's office, which is responsible for the ordering and printing of such forms, has not done so. And has given no indication of when they might.

"They have told us if there are no forms, then you can't make an application," said Andrew Siben, the lawyer for Serran-Pagan. "You have to fill out the forms. But they are wrong about that. We have applied by filing an affidavit from Mr. Serran-Pagan. They have to take it."

At a time when people are committed to preserving the rural way of life of the East End, mayor Joe Romanosky is, for lack of a better word, a throw-forward. He is, in my opinion, a master of nepotism, a proponent of suburbia and mowed lawns with sprinkler systems and a corrupter of democratic law.

Readers are urged to write to the New York State District Attorney's Office, Suffolk Division, North County Complex, Veterans' Memorial Highway, Happaugue, N.Y. 11788, who see to it that mayors do a good, and fair, job.

An Acutal Out Of Body Experience With This Successful Dot Com

By Dan Rattiner

I have a bone to pick with America Online and the Republican National Committee. It's an odd combination. But that's what's happening right now.

During the last year of the Presidency of George Bush, Sr., I got a phone call from someone at the Republican National Committee telling me that I had been personally selected by Mr. Bush to become chairman of a local division of the committee. Now, I know that when your President calls, you have to do what he tells you to do, but on the other hand, I am not a Republican and what this was about was Mr. Bush running for re-election. I am not a Democrat either, I might note. I am a registered Independent. My approach to the political American scene is let's wait and see what the various candidates have to say. If I like one, I'll vote for him. If I like another one, I'll vote for him instead. This is what being independent is all about.

I told the caller that I very much appreciated being singled out by Mr. Bush for this job, but I would make a lousy chairman because I was just an independent and as likely to get up in front of some Republicans and tell them they should vote for the Democrats on any particular occasion and the Republican National Committee might be ill served by someone who would do that. The woman thanked me for my time, said good-bye and that, I thought, was the end of it. It wasn't.

On frequent occasions over the years, I have been called again and again by the Republican National Committee to lead one charge over one hill or another. I keep telling them the same thing, that I am an Independent, that I am not registered as a Republican and to please stop calling.

Last week, I got a letter in the mail from the Republican National Committee.

"Dear Mr. Rattiner," it said. "I don't want to believe you've abandoned the Republican Party, but I have to ask... Have you given up? Our records show we have not yet received your 2002 Republican National Committee membership contribution! As Treasurer of the RNC, I know our Party's essentially cut President Bush's term in half! We must not let this happen. But we need your help to get our message out, bypass the liberal media filter with our own public outreach and communications, and defeat the relentless negative tactics of the Democrats and their army of left-wing attack artists."

Frankly, I was a bit upset about this, particularly with the last sentence, which seemed to suggest the Democrats were just a half notch above Al Queda. Also, they seem to have gone from simply asking if I would help to being angry I have not yet begun to do so.

It kind of reminded me of a phone conversation I once had about my New York apartment. It is a pied-a-terre, really, and it is just used on Wednesday nights. I had put an ad in the paper offering it for rent six nights a week. Someone could stay there every night, six nights a week, except Wednesday. A woman called.

"This sounds just perfect," she said. She had seen my ad. "My sister has to be in New York to have chemotherapy," she said. "This would be very suitable."

I reminded her we would need the apartment on Wednesday and she said she understood that, and so we got to talking about prices and deposits. She was ready to sign a lease. But then she said this.

"So what's she supposed to do on Wednesday?" And that's what reminded me of the Republican National Committee.

success depends directly on grassroots supporters like you. So I am surprised and concerned we've not yet heard from you this year.

"I know other things come up, and perhaps you've just delayed sending your 2002 Republican Party membership contribution. President Bush is counting on Republican leaders like you to help him with the tough challenges that lie ahead.

"As you know, if the Democrats regain control of both houses of Congress this year, they will

Now let us move on to my trouble with America Online.

I had called technical support about my AOL account because the spellcheck had somehow gotten turned on in my outgoing mail and it was a big pain and I wanted their help in turning it off. I waited half an hour to talk to somebody. Then, after the phone call — they showed me how to fix the spellcheck — I began to get phone calls from friends telling me that my e-mail account at AOL had been closed. After checking my e-mail, I realized that there were no incoming messages and that I was unable to send any out.

I called AOL technical again and a woman named Rose told me that this was normal and sometimes the AOL techies fiddle with an account and shut it down for awhile but it would never be for more than an hour or two. I asked this techie if she would check my account to see if that was what the problem was, and she said she didn't have to check it and that is what the problem was. That night I went to bed, expecting it would be all fixed in the morning.

But it wasn't. The problem persisted all day and into the next day. I tried at three hour intervals to get a techie at AOL to do something about this, but they wouldn't. They read me the same paragraph in the manual about it being something that the techies were temporarily tinkering with. I told them that was NOT the problem, that the tinkering, if it was tinkering, had evolved into a full-blown account renovation and that whatever it was that had happened to my account had happened when I called in about the spellcheck problem. Finally, on the second day, I got somebody to look and, indeed, there HAD been something done by a techie to screw up my account when they had fixed my spellcheck. Now I had my AOL back. But I was steaming. I decided I would write them an e-mail explaining all this, but then later I decided it was not worth the effort and just let it pass.

Three days later, I got an e-mail from an AOL supervisor asking me to evaluate the service I had gotten. There was a form to be filled out. I filled it out. ARE YOU HAPPY WITH THE SERVICE YOU GOT? it asked. "I am appalled by it," I replied. WOULD YOU DESCRIBE YOUR CONTACT WITH AOL SERVICE AS A GOOD EXPERIENCE? "I would describe it as a dreadful experience," I wrote.

There was one section where they allowed that I could write whatever I wanted in great detail to explain myself. I took the time to explain my problem in great detail and to describe them as a bunch of ignorant bozos. Then I pressed SEND. My comments were on their way.

I truly expected I would get a phone call from a higher up at AOL. What I got, however, was another e-mail. And they had transformed my "complaint" into a "concern."

"Hello! My name is Kevin from America Online (AOL)," it began. "As a Customer Care Consultant from the TechMail Department, it is my pleasure to assist you with issues or concerns regarding America Online Services. I want to apologize for the delay in responding to your e-mail and for any frustrations you are experiencing with the service. I understand you have a follow-up question regarding the previous correspondence. I really would like to assist you with this issue but I need more information to be able to help you."

Well, maybe there is a mix-up, I thought. And

French Soldier Falls Off The Stage During Performance Of "War And Peace"

By Dan Rattiner

An actor lost his bearings and fell into the orchestra pit at the Metropolitan Opera House in Manhattan on Saturday night. He wasn't injured but what happened as a result is a perfect lesson on the difference between city life and country life.

First of all, here's what happened. The actor was Simon Deonarian, an "extra" who, along with many others, was retreating from Russia in a snowstorm during the disastrous Napoleonic campaign of 1812. The snow (white confetti) was falling, the wind was blowing and he was trudging along in the ripped clothing of a defeated French grenadier with the rest of them, when, apparently carried away by the music, song and gravity of the moment, he put his arm up in front of his face to protect it from the "snow," and then staggering this way and that. Suddenly, he found himself off balance right on the lip of the stage where there was a net barely three feet wide to protect from the very thing that was about to happen. He swayed, calculated he might bang his head on the stage lip while landing in the narrow net, and so jumped over the net and landed seven feet down, on his feet, after crashing into and breaking the violin bow of Sylvia Danburg, the assistant first violinist.

The music stopped. The audience members who saw the accident got to their feet and looked down, causing the rest of the audience members to get to their feet and try to peer over the heads of up and out and walked off into the wings, after which the orchestra resumed and this premiere performance of Tolstoy's War and Peace continued where it had left off.

When the opera ended and after everyone had taken their curtain calls, Deonarian was led back onto the stage by Joseph Volpe, the Met general manager, who raised Deonarian's arm to indicate he was all right, after which Deonarian raised his other arm and smiled and then, with Mr. Volpe, trotted off.

Now here in the country, if this had happened, it would have been a whole different matter. The music would indeed have stopped and the people would have stood up, but more out of concern rather than curiosity for the fellow who fell into the pit. Was he all right? He would emerge, the people would applaud and the play would continue. Afterwards, leaving the theater, (The John Drew? The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center? Southampton High School?) people might talk about it for a minute or two. But then they would forget about it. They would go home.

Larry Glazener, who plays double bass, said he saw what he at first thought was a "flying squirrel."

those in front of them to see what was going on. And so, for ten minutes, the French troops had a reprieve. They milled around on the stage. Deonarian, who is 21, 5 foot 6 and 120 pounds and was paid $30 for the day, stood up in the pit and peered back up at them. Then he climbed terwards, leaving the theater, (The John Drew? The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center? Southampton High School?) people might talk about it for a minute or two. But then they would forget about it. They would go home.

This is not what happened in New York. First of all, after the incident, this $30 a day extra was told his services would no longer be required for future performances. There were concerns about whether this would affect the review of the play in the Times the next day. (It did.) There were articles in the newspapers about it, television interviews about it, talk of whether the set was safe, meetings about legal repercussions, re-broadcasts of the videotape of the performance during which Larry Glazener, who plays double bass, said he saw what he at first thought was "a flying squirrel," and there was talk about who was responsible. Indeed, the next day, Mr. Volpe ordered Deonarian interviewed and videotaped again, after which Mr. Volpe announced that Deonarian had admitted that he had jumped and had not fallen. After that, Deonarian claimed he never said that but it was really no big deal so if that is how they wanted to interpret it that was okay with him.

There was talk about the set, designed by George Tsybin, which had as its most unusual element a curved floor, suggesting the curvature of the earth, thereby signifying the monumental and historical aspects of the retreat.

so I wrote about what had happened again, in great detail, this time being absolutely sure I was making myself clear. I got back the following e-mail.

"Hello! My name is Cha Cha from America Online (AOL)," it began. "As a Customer Care Consultant from the TechMail Department, it is my pleasure to assist you with issues or concerns regarding

There were those who said they didn't want their names mentioned, but off the record they thought a bulging, rounded earth was a dangerous set or at least a very difficult one to negotiate. On the other hand, there was the star of the performance, the Russian soprano Natasha Rostova, who was making her Met debut.

"We all wore low-heeled, rubber-soled shoes for traction," she said, "and you have to watch out when dancing, be more careful than usual. You have to be stupid to fall into the orchestra pit."

Samuel Ramey, who sang the role of Field Marshal Kutuzov, said "You're not going to be running, jumping or leaping on a set like that. But I never had an uncomfortable feeling at all."

The taped conversation with Deonarian was conducted by Sharon E. Grubin, the lawyer for the Met. Afterwards, Mr. Volpe typed up a notice and posted it on a bulletin board backstage.

"The super (short for supernumerary or extra) who walked downstage and jumped into the orchestra pit blames no one but himself," the note read. "He went into the pit because he was overacting. In an attempt to illustrate that the troops were snow-blown, tired and hungry, he decided to put his arm over his face and act at stumbling backwards. He turned around at the edge of the stage and jumped down into the pit."

Tolstoy's War and Peace, as composed in epic fashion by Sergei Prokofiev, will continue its run with its 52 soloists, 120 choristers, 227 extras, a dog, a goat and a horse but not with Simon Deonarian. The actors will continue to perform on this curved set, which, among other things, during the snowstorm, revolves.

Mr. Volpe told a reporter for The New York Times he was re-instructing the extras to just follow the stage direction and not attempt to "act" in any way different from the way they had rehearsed.

"I'm saddened that the memories of opening night audience members will be overshadowed by this event, rather than just the glory of a great opera with wonderful actors in a superb production."

Out here in the country, a few people the next morning might be sitting on some bar stools at John Papa's Cafe drinking coffee and the topic might come up.

"Hear about that fella who walked off the stage at the John Drew last night?"

"Oh yeah? Who was it?"

"George Williamson. They were doin' the retreat from Russia."

"Was he okay?"

"Twisted his ankle, I think. But that was all."

"I hear they might put that ticket-spitting parking machine back up a month early this spring. The one they got right outside here."

"Oh yeah?"

"That's what they say."

I love the country.

By Jolie Trueman-Honey

Who taught you to tell the truth? Who taught you to say "please" and "thank you?" Who taught you to clean up after yourself, to share, to play nice? Well, if you are a public school student today, the answer to these questions might not be your parents, but very possibly Paul Failla.

You see, the times they certainly are a-changing, and while nobody would deny that today's students are receiving a very comprehensive education, there is a new requirement recently enacted by the New York State Education Department that is quite different from anything that has come before. In September of 2001, district superintendents of schools received a memo from James A. Kadamus, the Deputy Commissioner of the State Education Department, describing a new law enacted by the state legislature and Governor Pataki, which requires instruction in, "civility, citizenship and character education." The law states that students should receive instruction on, "the principles of honesty, tolerance, personal responsibility, respect for others, observance of laws and rules, courtesy, dignity and other traits..."

And here I thought families were supposed to teach that! Unfortunately, some just aren't.

Meet "Paul Failla." Or perhaps I should say "Officer Failla," or maybe "Actor Paul Failla," for all of these labels are correct. Failla, who was born in Queens and raised in Nassau County, has been an East End resident for the past eighteen years. As a 22-year veteran of the Suffolk County Police Department, Paul's day job is to recruit young people for careers in law enforcement. His passion, however, is acting. A member of the Screen Actors' Guild, Paul has performed in 27 regional theater productions over the last seven years and will soon be seen in two upcoming feature films, Chelsea Walls directed by Ethan Hawke and Unfaithful directed by Adrian Lynne and starring Richard Gere. And he uses every bit of his talent and experience in this tour de force program that he brings to the Westhampton Beach Middle School on a blustery January morning. Seventy-five eighth graders sit mesmerized for three entire periods while he instructs them on...how to be good. No easy feat.

How does he do it? The first time I saw him work his magic, I had my doubts. He sets up a series of posters, important words, in no particular order, on easels behind him: respect, destructive decisions, leadership, communication, dignity, diversity, ridicule, racism. And in large letters: values. I thought to myself, if he stands there and defines these terms, these Generation Nintendo kids will literally die of boredom. Was I ever wrong. Without the assistance of loud music, strobe lights or any particular fanfare, Officer Failla begins a roller coaster ride of stories, anecdotes, dramatic scenes, reminiscences that keeps the audience, students and teachers alike, laughing, occasionally crying, but always listening.

He begins every program with the same words: "So, how ya doin'," in his best Tony Soprano

"The law states that imitation. At 6 feet tall with an athletic build and slicked back black hair, the "tough guy" persona comes naturally to him. But don't be fooled; he just as easily morphs into a five year-old girl telling her father she loves him, or a scared 17 year-old stopped by a police officer for possession of marijuana, or a 30-something homeless man named Robin Hood. And each character is part of a story, a story intended to clarify values, or define terms, or simply to teach the kids to do the right thing.

For example, he says, "Is there anyone in this room who's perfect? Who's never had a bad hair day? Never had a blemish? Never needed glasses on your eyes, metal on your teeth? Always been picked first for a sports team, always been accepted by the cool crowd? If so, tonight before you go to sleep, thank whoever you believe in. The rest of us know what it feels like to be ridiculed. And make no mistake about it, my friends, ridicule is pain." And this is his segue into the Columbine tragedy. "Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold both talked about being ridiculed," he says. And he then relates the story of Columbine in the form of a short play.

It was this tragedy that produced the New York State law, known as Project SAVE (Safe Schools Against Violence in Education Act), which was enacted as an antidote to the horrific events at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colorado, and the innumerable other violent incidents that have plagued American schools both before and since. Project SAVE requires school districts to implement safety plans both district-wide and on the building level, and to plan programs that will eliminate the influences such as drug use, bullying, and racial tensions, that could lead to violence. And that is why Failla is standing before East End students for three periods at a stretch.

What makes Failla's performance so compelling is that he moves utterly seamlessly from one segment of the presentation to the next. While much of what he relates is deeply moving, he continually breaks the tension with his uproarious sense of humor. Talking about the importance of being a leader ("Leaders take a step back...leaders walk away from destructive behavior...") he asks the students if any of them are athletes. They raise their hands and he asks them to name their sport: soccer, football, basketball, volleyball. (He makes sure they recognize cheerleading as a sport. "Hey, you need strength, endurance, agility and an artistic sense. To me, that's a sport.") And when he finishes polling them, he turns to Jeff, the kid sitting in the front row whom he's been "picking on" all morning, and says, "Jeff, my man, so what's your sport?" And, then, shifting into his best nerdy voice, Paul responds to his own question: "Jeff says, 'Checkers.' I know what you mean, man, there's no greater feeling in the world than yelling 'King me!'"

Yes, like all stand-up comics, Paul loves to target a few individuals to be on the receiving end of his jokes. Jeff has already served as the driver of that

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 189

The Happy Hooker

It seems we're having an early spring. That means fishing will start a little earlier this year. My ex-husband is a Catch & Release Fly Fisherman. My family nearly killed him on his first fishing outing with us. He caught a fish, unhooked it and THREW IT BACK! No! Wrong! There is no throwing back the fish! What is the point of that? Do you buy an ice cream cone and throw it back at the counter, NO! We are Catch & Fillet Fishermen. If you hook it, cook it. We start the summer with a stock of white wine, stewed tomatoes and worms.

Here are the official limits for Suffolk this year. But who is keeping track of all this? Is there going to be a fish check-in at every boat launch?

Winter Flounder: 11-inch size limit, 15 fish per angler, season is from third Saturday in March to June 30 and September 15 to November 30. Bring scissors, if you catch a 12-inch flounder, just trim the tail a little. Since the limit is 15 flounder per angler, just count to 14 and stay there....

Summer Flounder (fluke): 17-inch size limit, seven fish per angler, season is from May 2 to October 31. Ooooo a 17 inch flounder, dinner for 4. Flounder aren't a boney fish, you can fillet them in the boat and use the guts as bait to catch more. As you can see, there is no limit on flounder fillets.

Striped Bass: 28-inch size limit, one fish per angler (two per angler on party and charter boats), season is from May 8 to December 15. Party, I mean, Charter boats, it's not always easy to keep track of where the beer, I mean, where's the bait.... two parties per fish, no occupants in the boat over 28 inches. And the son of a bass who is driving can't drink more than the fish.

Bluefish: no size limit, 10 fish per angler (including snappers), season is open all year. 10 fish per season.... Ha! Not in my family! No bluefish is safe if one Flynn is in the water... Mom brings a can of stewed tomatoes and a tupperware container with her so she can start marinating the bluefish right in the boat. We have to yell at her to take the hook out of the fish's mouth and kill it first...

Weakfish: 16-inch size limit, six fish per angler,

car who's explaining to the officer who has spotted a clear plastic bag containing "a leaf-like substance" on the floor of his vehicle, "Well, you see officer, we were just driving along and we had the moon roof open, ya know? And this jet was flying overhead, and we heard something fall into the car and..." But Paul is very gentle in his ribbing, and leads the audience in applauding the cooperation of these students.

Within the course of his performance, he helps the students define their common values, emphasizes season is open all year. Well, it's not as good a bluefish, but we can manage if we have to. Bake this in white wine.... delicious.

Scup (porgy): nine-inch size limit, 50 fish per angler, season is from July 1 to November 17. This is not a good eating fish that's why the limit is so high. You can't give these away.

Sea Bass: 11-inch size limit, 25 fish per angler, season is May 10 to February 28. Bass is one of the reasons God invented butter and garlic. There is nothing better on a summer night than a great piece of bass.

Tautog (blackfish): 14-inch size limit, 10 fish per angler from October 7 to May 31, one fish per angler from June 1 to October 6. What kinda rule is this? How many fisherman are sitting in the boat with DayTimers, looking up what day it is when they hook a 14 inch blackfish? What if they turn the boat to face Mecca, do they get an extra fish?

Cod: 21-inch size limit, no possession limit, season is open all year. Cod, all you can catch, all you can eat.... is this a great country or what?

Spanish mackerel: 14-inch size limit, 15 fish per angler, season is open all year. When you catch the fish, look it in the eyes and ask, "Tu este Mackerel de espana? Es una pregunta muy importante... que? No se? No problema...Tu este mi diner ahora mismo...Tu quiere vino blanca?"

bors in Sag Harbor and thereabouts. Rona Jaffe and James Lipton among many other celebs have been turning out for the current production of the Met's "War and Peace" in New York according to Neal, and it seems that Sag Harbors summer resident James Lipton will be holding a kind of new production himself. His very celebrated television show on the Bravo cable show entitled the Actors Studio nabbed the interview that no one has ever gotten...Johnny Depp. We look forward to that exclusive and he can add that Montauk's Percy Heath, president of the Montauk Artists Association and Jazz musician extraordinaire, was honored by the National Endowment for the Arts with their "American Jazz Masters Award" recently. The event was held in Los Angeles.

Michael Silberkleit of East Hampton has announced the revival of two old and well known bands. They are Josie and the Pussycats and The Archies, both groups originally appearing in cartoon form in Archie Comics, but now auditioning for real performers to play the roles. The revival is being spearheaded by Lou Pearlman, who developed hitmakers such as the Backstreet Boys, N Sync and O-Town. Pearlman is partnering with Archie Entertainment, the licensing arm of Archie Comics Publications, to make this happen.

So do you want to talk fashion? That's just what lovely Christie Brinkely was doing at World Cottage Audio & Post, Bridgehampton, while producer Julie Andariese of McCann Erickson, N.Y. attended the very same voice-over session through the magic of digital connections between World Cottage and Howard Schwartz Recording in NYC. The commercial was for Littly Tikes Talking Fashion "Vanity," an adorable young person's toy. Wolfgang Puck was also scheduled to add a touch of his delightful voice for another Little Tikes "Kitchen" toy commercial. Sounds like they picked the perfect personalities.

Co-Chairs Susan A. Davis, Patti Frank, Pamela M. Gilmartin and Nancy C. ing that while we all look different, in terms of our values, we are really quite similar. He shows them his book of leaders, students whose autographs he has collected over the years, who have succeeded by virtue of hard work and good decision-making. Among these leaders is Stephon Marbury, of the Phoenix Suns, whom Paul met in his senior year at Abraham Lincoln High School in Brooklyn.

He also shares a picture of the person that he considers, "the greatest man who ever lived." It is his father, the man who instilled in Paul the values by which he lives. He urges students who may not be fortunate enough to have a parent with whom they can really communicate to seek out an adult who cares and will listen. "There are people sitting right in this room who will help you, your teachers and administrators. If something doesn't sit right in your gut, people, get help."

Westhampton Beach Middle School Principal Phillip DeBrita applauds Paul's workshop. "He has a good message for kids. He makes them think, causes them to slow down and make better decisions, remember their values." He further says that there is something in the program for every student to relate to. But he also emphasizes that Failla's workshop, which is approved and available to all Nassau and Suffolk schools through the BOCES Arts in Education program, is just one way that Westhampton is dealing with the new legislation. "Stand alone programs like Paul's are certainly valuable," says DeBrita, "but we need to incorporate character education into the existing school curricula to make a difference."

To that end, Westhampton Schools invited two of the five authors of a book entitled Connecting Character to Conduct: Helping Students Do the Right Thing to the district to conduct workshops with faculty. The district has adopted the book's guiding principle, known by the acronym "RICE:" Respect, Impulse Control, Compassion and Equity. DeBrita believes that by adopting this policy and taking a pro-active stance, his district will be better equipped to avoid the myriad problems that schools seem to share regardless of location or economics.

Failla's program, which was launched at Longwood High School, has been seen by students in Mattituck, Riverhead, Sag Harbor, Shelter Island and some 30 other districts across Long Island. When he began to develop it, Failla sought the help of professionals, teachers, who understood the new state requirements and wanted to see a program that would satisfy districts' needs. Daniel Tomaszewski, the director of the alternative high school in Longwood was instrumental in providing Paul with the needed help, along with English faculty members Patrick Cauchy and Kathleen Leahy.

So, how successful is Failla's workshop? He says, "I've received over 3,000 letters from students who have experienced my workshop. The feedback has been remarkable."

I believe it; as soon as the program ended, he was instantly surrounded by students who wanted to talk to him, share stories, just shake his hand.

When you think about it, it's a sad commentary on our society that teaching traits like honesty and courtesy, once the sole domain of the family, is now an additional responsibility placed on our already overburdened schools. Failla, however, is optimistic. "When we were growing up," he says, "there were fewer bad influences. More families were intact. And still, you wouldn't believe how many great kids I meet every time I visit a school. Those kids are not just good kids; they're strong good kids. Some parents out there are doing a super job."

What are Paul's plans? He loves to act. He's done both comedy and drama, but he says that there is no greater thrill than making an audience laugh. And while Captain Von Trapp in The Sound of Music and Max Prince in Laughter on the 23rd Floor are among his favorite acting roles, teaching students positive values is a role that he hopes to be playing for years to come.

places, to hold them tight and to tell them they appreciate everything they do. And they want men to tell them they love them.

Men want only one thing. And when they get a little long in the tooth, and a little short in some other areas, they now have a drug, approved by the Food and Drug Administration, that can help. It's called Viagra.

In the next year, according to the articles I have read about Botox, which comes from pigs, Botox is going to outsell Viagra. Women are going to disappear for an afternoon, get Botox in their lips to make them poutier and more kissable and in their foreheads to make them smoother and never, ever capable of expressing anger. They are also going to get themselves lifted, silicone gelled, dyed, capped, tinted, waxed and trimmed and maybe, if necessary, even liposucked. Men are going to pop this little blue pill. And then, when the two get together, the women are going to get paid attention to and fawned over, and the men are going to score. That's the phrase they'll use. They'll score, they dance a little dance, then spike the ball, then roll over and go to sleep.

Later, women will talk to them.

"Are you mad at me?" the women will ask.

"No, why?"

"You look mad at me."

"Well, I'm not. Are you mad at me?"

"Of course I'm mad at you."

"You don't look mad at me."

"I'm mad at you because you do not pay attention to me."

"I am paying attention. I worship the ground you walk on."

"Then why can't you see that I'm mad at you?"

"Botox?"

She kicks him in the groin.

So much has been written about this. Men are from Mars Women are from Venus. Recent events have brought to our attention that, in the Islamic religion, a man is allowed up to four wives at the same time. If one is mad at him, he can try another. He is clueless, after all. Give him four tries. It evens the odds. Men always drive the car. Women go nuts on the night of the full moon. Men are good for opening ketchup bottles and figuring things out logically. Women intuitively know the answer before they even hear the question. Women bear babies. Women are smaller. They live longer. They smell nicer. They get fat in the hips. Men go bald, get fat in the pot, and are the trouble-makers, the crooks, the drunks, the murderers. It is the men who get arrested and thrown in jail and it is the women who visit them there. Women love candy, jewelry and flowers. Men love sex.

The more of these essential truths I write — and I admit to the bell curve, even the overlapping bell curve, which says there are many men who exhibit sensitive behavior and many women who exhibit aggressive behavior — anyway, the more of these essential truths I write, the angrier it is going to make women. And, thanks to Botox, the less we are going to be able to tell.

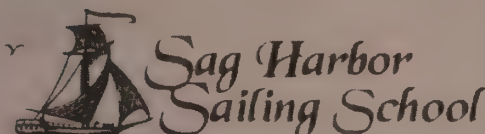

Fortunately, I will look at them and as far as I'm concerned, everything is going to look perfectly all right. There's a problem?

EAST END HOSPICE'S CAMP GOOD GRIEF CELEBRATES N.Y. WOMEN

Each year on Valentine's Day the East End Hospice has a luncheon to bring together fabulous women and celebrate life. This year the theme was to benefit Camp Good Grief a free children's bereavement camp on the East End. The key note speaker was NBC Newschannel 4's Jane Hanson who many of us see before our husbands each morning. The event at the Tribeca Grand Hotel raised over $28,000 for the cause.

Sarah and Syrah: Going for the Gold

Although the phrase was coined at the turn of the last century, Long Island's north shore has truly been living up to its old moniker, "The Gold Coast," during recent weeks. With the thrill of the Winter Olympics behind us, Sarah Hughes is not the only Long Islander to walk away with a gold medal. While the young figure skater from the North Shore town of Kings Point was practicing her triple salchows and double axels before delivering that breathtaking long program, Laurel Lake Vineyards out on the Island's North Fork was scoring a gold medal of its own for its 1999 Syrah at the annual Florida State Fair 2002 International Wine & Grape Juice Competition.

Florida – perhaps most popular to us Yankees this time of year as the destination of choice for "snowbirds" and college students on spring break – is also the location of the annual international fair, held this year in Tampa during the weekend of February 8-9. Among over 900 entries from wineries around the world, eight gold medals were awarded to New York State wines and only one to a Long Island winery. Interesting, but less and less surprising these days, is that the winning wine was a syrah, a lesser-known grape variety grown here on the Island that is quickly gathering attention and acclaim. While only a handful of vineyards here grow syrah, those that do are getting noticed.

"Since Chilean owners took over a little more than two years ago, accolades have begun to roll in," said Tom Sidor, tasting room manager at Laurel Lake. The winery also walked away with a silver medal for its 1999 Cabernet Sauvignon and, in the March 2002 issue of Wine Enthusiast magazine, look for noteworthy scores of 87 points for the 1999

Chardonnay Reserve and 85 points for that silver medal-winning 1999 Cabernet.

Windows to the Soul

The irony that a celebration should recall the horror and sadness of September 11 is inescapable, but it also provides us with a chance to reflect on what was lost and to remember, with great affection, people and places we will always hold dear.

Last year, as all of you who attended will doubtless never forget, the 11th Annual Windows on Long Island Wine gala was held, on May 1, at Windows on the World on the 107th floor of One World Trade Center. It was a splendid event, made all the more memorable by the tragedy that ensued.

But New Yorkers are nothing if not resourceful and resilient, and this year the show goes on at Guastavino's Restaurant on 59th Street on Monday, April 29, from 5:30-9 p.m. All twenty-two Long Island Wine Council members will be participating along with top Long Island and New York culinary institutions. The event will be co-hosted by Thomas Matthews, executive editor at the Wine Spectator, and Andrea Immer, wine expert and author. For tickets, call 212-725-6611, extension 225.

Proceeds will go, in part, to Windows of Hope, a fund that provides support to the families of employees of Windows on the World whose lives were lost on that bright, sunny and unforgettable day last fall.

Conversations with John C. Ross: A New Take on an Old Tradition

With springtime just around the bend now, it's time to think green after a long and rather odd winter. When was the last time we went outside in shirtsleeves in February? But before celebrating the spring equinox we must observe one last rite of winter's passage: Saint Paddy's Day. While recipes abound for traditional Irish fare, I sought some ideas of a less conventional nature from our most beloved and inveterate North Fork chef, John Ross.

"As February turns into March, we hit the traditional 'low' of the year here on the North Fork," said John recently. "It's a great time to get together with friends at home or at a restaurant to enjoy some good, Irish-inspired North Fork food. The ingredients that come to my mind, besides the usual potatoes, cabbage and, of course, corned brisket of beef, are mussels, salmon and leeks." Would you expect less from a chef that combined oysters with Pernod at his venerable establishment, Ross' North Fork?

If Saint Patrick had celebrated his Day in Nova Scotia, he might have enjoyed one of the Maritime Province's specialties, planked salmon, an inventive version of which appears below. Who knows, corned beef could have come to fame solely through those fabulous and infamous sandwiches, "thicker than a Russian novel" (according to food critic Bryan Miller) at Manhattan's Carnegie Deli instead of through Ireland's patron saint. We could all be mustarding rye bread, crunching garlic dills, watching videos of Broadway Danny Rose and celebrating Woody Allen Day instead. Well, at least in New York, anyway.

John remains serious about food at his Rotisserie and Smokehouse down the road from his former, more formal digs. Everything here is homemade and first rate. But he can't, fortunately, resist a little tongue-in-cheek humor.

"These days, nutritionists follow the food pyramid, but they used to recommend a balanced diet with daily portions from the 'four food groups.' Four food groups? 'Well,' said John, 'the only 'perfect food' is said to be Irish coffee. After all, it does contain fat, sugar, caffeine and alcohol. That's four, isn't it?'"

John's Saint Patrick's Day Menu Billi Bi Soup

Wash 3 pounds of mussels and place in a soup pot. Add 2 cups chardonnay, 3 chopped shallots, a few parsley stems (chop tops and reserve), 1 bay leaf, pinch of thyme, 1 onion (quartered) and freshly ground pepper. Cover, bring to a boil and simmer until mussels open. Strain the broth into a saucepan, remove the mussels from their shells and set aside.

Add 2 cups heavy cream to strained broth and heat to boiling. After broth boils, remove pan from heat and stir in 2 beaten egg yolks. Return pan to burner and heat just to thicken broth, stirring, then add shelled mussels. Season with a little hot sauce (such as Tabasco) and garnish with chopped parsley. Makes about 4 servings.

Cedar Planked Salmon

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

Purchase a few low-grade cedar shingles from the lumberyard and cut them into 3" x 6" rectangles. Soak in water for 30 minutes.

In a bowl, place a couple tablespoons of olive oil and a little chopped dill. Put 4 salmon fillets (about 1/3 pound each) in the bowl and coat with oil and dill. Next place each fillet on a cedar shingle and sprinkle with kosher salt and black pepper. Spread a thin coat of dijon mustard on top of each fillet and sprinkle with bread crumbs.

Place salmon-topped shingles on a sheet pan and then place in the preheated oven. Cook until fish flakes easily, about 10 minutes. Make sure that cedar is SOAKED or it will catch fire in the oven. Remove pan from oven.

Remove fish from shingles and serve over braised leeks and colcannon (recipe follows).

Colcannon

Saute 1 cup chopped scallions in butter until wilted. Set aside. Parboil 2 cups chopped cabbage, drain and set aside. Cook about 2 pounds of potatoes, mash and add scallions and cabbage. Add a little heavy cream, salt and pepper to taste. Serve with the planked salmon above.

John C. Ross owns Rotisserie and Smokehouse on the North Road in Southold. Stop by for some of his delicious fare (and delightfully irreverent quips) any day, 12 noon-8 p.m. Carry out or eat in and bring a bottle of your favorite North Fork wine. John has glasses...Call 765-9655.

Thoughts On The Ocean... And Commitment

Isn't it amazing how our ocean, bays and creeks draw people to them? While many different aquatic activities appeal to us, either recreationally or for economic sustenance, I believe that there's a deeper, more innate relationship existing between us and the water that draws us, almost hypnotically, to it. It's the feeling you get with that first glimpse of water when you're driving to the beach or that sense of escape with that first step into the sand from the blacktop. You can almost feel the cleansing action of the afternoon summer breeze as you stroll a waterfront - it's like coming home.

Taken holistically, the feeling is inscrutable, almost indefinable. But for me, Romain Gary's piece, Here is Might and Reassuring Promise, captures the sensation, if only fleetingly.

"The faithful sea keeps us company, sharing since the beginning of time all the torment, longing and restlessness of our spirit. The sea has a way of assuming our deepest self with such a triumphant mimicry that it seldom fails to free us from our hidden fears and torturing doubts. No person has ever walked away from the sea without having been rescued. The sea surges and recoils, thunders in boundless confidence and then lies low, conquers and retreats, heaves and broods and pounds furiously against its limits- the faithful image of our spirit as it struggles onward between hope and doubt. No matter how far away we throw our hope, the sea will always find it and bring it back to us intact."

On Commitment

Often in our work here at the Cornell Cooperative Extension Marine Program in Southold, we speak of the importance of minimizing our individual impacts on the marine environment. We examine opportunities people can take in their own backyards to prevent pollution of our marine waters. Unfortunately, few programs result in such unanimous agreement in the room and such inaction at home.

Somehow, some way, I have to believe you, the reader, can identify your own emotions with Romain Gary's inspirational thoughts. We have to become more committed to preserving a healthy sea. Not only do we have to do this for our environment in general, but also to protect that part of each of us that the sea nurtures and inspires.

If we all changed one or more of the following habits, it would make a tremendous difference in the quality of our local waters. Won't you do your part to help keep our local waters clean?

1. Pick up beach debris, such as plastics and Styrofoam that has washed-up on our shores. Plastics take 500 years to decompose. Floating debris can harm and kill marine life. It is an ugly symbol of environmental degradation.

2. Watch but don't feed shorebirds. Feeding wild waterfowl may make them sick - and it pollutes our local waters. A major water polluter is the bacteria in fecal material from waterfowl, pets, other animals and from faulty septic systems. This can result in beaches being closed to swimming, fishing, and shellfishing.

3. Scoop up after your pet. Be a responsible pet owner. Don't let your dog pollute our beaches. The main reason beaches close to swimming or shellfishing is due to high levels of fecal coliform bacteria.

4. Wash your car on the lawn or other porous surface (or at a car wash, but not on a paved driveway), to keep that oily, soapy, gunk from running down the street into a storm drain and directly into the Peconic Estuary, where it will harm or kill marine life. Better yet, use little or no detergent.

5. Garden with native plants. This will go a long way towards keeping polluting fertilizers, herbicides and pesticides out of our local waters. Native plants require less water, and no killer chemicals, which, after a rainstorm, can wash onto the pavement.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Starting out in East Hampton this week, I caught the winter clearance sale at Nilaya on Main Street. This is an unbelievable sale, $2 and up on decorative objects, shawls, bags, fashion merchandise, candles, ceramics, Limoges boxes, paintings, photo albums, jewelry and so much more. Check this one out, you will be surprised.

Newtown Lane's Billy Martin's has great prices on their rocket buster boots. Now is the time to stock up on the ones you may have passed up...

Architrove on Montauk Highway in East Hampton has a wonderful selection of lighting fixtures such as sconces and chandeliers, gorgeous tables and accessories.

At Country Gear on Main Street in Bridgehampton you will find fabulous Loom Italia indoor/outdoor merchandise including my favorite, the woven-wire furniture. This is a must see shop...

Tutto Bene 2 right off Main Street in Bridgehampton is having a great sale on new spring coats. Spring is just around the corner you know.

At the Antique Rug Galleria on Main Street in Southampton they have an eclectic selection of new and antique room size carpets. Expert restoration, hand cleaning and rug appraisals are also available here.

EGP on Montauk Highway in Watermill is opening their doors for the upcoming season on March 1. Stay tuned...

Sag Harbor's Headley Studio and Generous Fashions is having a "birthday sale" during their "March on Furniture." Marked down from 25% to 50%, are special hand-painted mirrors, teak corner cabinets, white-wash side tables and table trays. Steve, the owner, told me that if you mention this column, he would take an additional 5% off your purchase.

Heading over to the Romany Kramoris Gallery on Main Street in Sag Harbor, I am always amazed at the selection of eclectic merchandise in this shop. There is so much to choose from including lamps, jewelry, vases, glassware, music, posters, you name it and it is probably here. Stop in and say hi.

Looking for that vintage outfit with that special look? Out of the Closet, located on Madison Street in Sag Harbor is full to the rafters with merchandise to fit everyone's pocketbook. Lots of 60s and 70s clothing and accessories and much more.

A little off the beaten path, at Arlines Surf-Skate-Snow there is "winter clearance sale" going on right now. All snowboards, bindings and boots are 20% to 50% off along with all the jackets, pants and wool sweaters. Now that's a sale! Located on Main Road in Aquebogue, check this one out.

Home sweet home, I go! Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

ART COMMENTARY

LOCAL COLOR AND THE ARTS: PART II

While the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts in Maryland, doesn't seem to resemble our own Guild Hall or the Parrish Art Museum, they all have much in common. For example, the Washington County Museum is an art center, which provides regional, cultural leadership close to a large city, yet far enough away to serve various interests and locales (in this case, Western Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia).

Established in 1929, the Washington County Museum has a permanent collection and ambience more akin to the Parrish (landscape artists like Childe Hassam and Frederic Church) with a smaller but growing contemporary collection (Philip Guston and Milton Avery). Some fine local, emerging artists are represented as well (like Jack Kaiktsian). Typically, the Washington County Museum features varied programs: a jazz quintet, art classes and forthcoming exhibition, "Art by Women" honoring women's history month. Like our local museums, no doubt they are also dealing with financial cutbacks and other problems that many local, small art centers face.

There are notable differences, however. The Washington County Museum is incorporated, built as the focal point of Hagerstown's City Park. The area is indeed impressive, with the museum overlooking a lake with an ample supply of ducks and swans. Impressive as well are the classic sculptures that adorn the museum's glass enclosed atrium. Inside, the current exhibitions include "A Celebration of a Century:

American Art 1800-1900" and "African American Art." We found several arresting paintings in the former display, although contemporary art is more to this

Guppy, featuring the sea and its dangers. There were other surprises, including a 1984 mixed media print of a wrapped Volvo by Christo. Christo has been particularly busy these past few months, having shows at Bridgehampton Long Island Realty and also in Washington, D.C. Not included in the main presentation were glass pieces by Dale Chihuly, a frequent exhibitor at the Long House Reserve. It's always a pleasure and surprise to encounter his work whenever and wherever it appears.

The museum's second exhibit, "African American Art," was neither comprehensive nor up-to-date, but did contain a few excellent examples: Joshua Johnson's portrait of a mother and daughter, painted by America's first professional black artist, was most arresting. Dox Thrash's "Heaven" showing four figures working in a field, also possessed knowledge of a technique and sensitivity of subject. Finally, Sam Gilliam's "Wave" (1972) was a prerequisite for any overview dealing with contemporary African-American artists especially since Mr. Gilliam, a Washington, D.C. resident, has a well-earned international reputation.

Note: In the January 25, Art Commentary, a typo was made: Stanley Kubrick directed Paths of Glory.

The Washington County Museum surrounded by art critic's liking. For example, William Sartain's "Street in Algiers" (1880) and Thomas Moran's "Lower Manhattan from New Jersey" (1880) both evoked a dramatic mood with brilliant use of light. Conversely, Nancy Newcomer's "Valentine Cutout" (1832) was an unusual abstract collage that countered the other mostly representational works.

Thomas Birch's "The Rescue" was also unusual: a surreal although representational painting of the shipwrecked figures, it recalls pieces by East Ender James

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Gee, I'm happy to come to think that leading ladies are having their way — leading that is — even if not acting like ladies. They are women like Nicole Kidman currently in Birthday Girl and Halle Berry in Monster's Ball. Both are cursed by being fashion-correct, good lookin', at least for the business they're in, because women are usually given the "business" in the business and, rarely an Oscar if they're too attractive. One woman reviewer (who shall remain nameless and faceless, I'm sure) wrote of Halle Berry in Monster's Ball that she "is an elegant, polished, gorgeous actress inhabiting the life of a poor, down-trodden woman" and she went on and on to downgrade her performance. Well! I ask you to see the film, which is more than worthwhile and judge for yourself. How come if men are "cute," a code word for attractive, they're revered. And can Ben Affleck really act?

Ms. Berry's portrayal required an awful lot, but not just because she had to overcome "well-bred fashion." She plays a black woman in the deep South, poor, the wife of a convict on death row for over a year and she is dealing with a son feeding himself into ponderous obesity. Then, her husband is electrocuted and her burdened life sinks even lower. Chance has her meeting the head prison guard (Billy Bob Thornton), who led the execution team. The son of a regimented racist, Peter Boyle, expects his son to follow in tradition and become a third generation prison guard and hater of blacks. His son is not and, Billy Bob's foundation that is built on quicksand, quickly sinks, too.

Berry and Thornton come together in a sexually charged encounter both deeply taken with lust that is used to fill the nothingness of their lives and Ms. Berry excels at this. Her nakedness is as convincing as her acting. Mr. Thornton gives his now familiar, low-key, heavy-browed, as-natural-as-a-cup-of-diner-coffee, image but, even stronger. It's a quiet movie, with heavy bursts strewn along the way, but it never shouts and never preaches. The audience is drawn into lives, which are common, and yet so bizarre, they seem like your own experiences that you may never see.

Ms. Kidman is in another steep banking turn in styles as Birthday Girl, a "From Russia With Love" bride negotiated by the matchmaking company of the same name, received by a nice, common Brit (Ben Chaplin). He is a bank clerk and, like meek British bank clerks, he has a secret or two in his drawers. (No pun intended). She, on the other hand, has many secrets. Take, for example, her birthday and the party it produces! The guests from Russia who've come for money, not for love! The movie is full of little surprise parties, kind of like little raids on the festivities. Nicole's Nadia (or whatever her name is), is a surprisingly black haired, black mascara-ed (mostly running), send-up of a Meryl Streep vocal coach, with the sexiness, strength and determination of the recent immigrant house cleaners who wield a mop and broom like a pick and shovel. Come to think of it, they probably made this movie. Oh, yes. This was made before her other hits, Moulin Rouge and The Others. (Just so you know) So who gets the Academy Award — Nicole or Halle?

Short Cuts

Amelie — (120 minutes) Nominated for five Academy Awards and the winner of Best Film of the Year in France, Amelie is a tale of an adorable Parisian waitress (Audrey Tautou) whose goal in life is to straighten out others' lives. Along the way Amelie finds romance and the beauty of Paris. Directed by Jean-Pierre Jeunet. The film is rated R.

Big Fat Liar — (88 minutes) A teenage boy writes a school essay that gets into the hands of a Hollywood producer. When the boy and a friend catch wind of what has happened, they hit the hills to try and claim the rights. The film is rated PG.

Dragon Fly — (98 minutes) Starring Kevin Costner as a widowed pediatrician who thinks that his deceased wife is trying to communicate with him through the voices of his ailing patients. Kathy Bates plays Costner's neighbor that befriends him in his quest to decipher his wife's message. Look for Costner swarmed in hundreds of illuminated dragonflies and other absurd effects. The film is rated PG-13.

Gosford Park — (137 minutes) Nominated for 7 Academy Awards, including Best Picture. Gosford Park is the tale of a weekend hunting party gone wrong. Each guest has a story of their own, which makes for many amusing subplots. Set in 1930s England, Robert Altman directs a bevy of stars in this murder mystery. The film is rated R.

John Q — (118 minutes) Starring Denzel Washington, Anne Heche, Robert DuVall and James Woods. Denzel Washington plays John Q, who turns to drastic measures in order to get his son an urgent heart transplant. The story portrays the plight of a father left in a serious predicament because of his inability to pay medical expenses. The film is rated PG-13.

Queen of the Damned — (110 minutes) Starring the late singer-actress Aaliyah in a story about two vampires drawn to each other by the lure of music. Stuart Townsend plays a legendary vampire that rises from decades of slumber to reinvent himself as a rock star. Based on the Anne Rice novel The Vampire Chronicles. The film is rated R.

Super Troopers — (110 minutes) A comedy about a team of Vermont State troopers that must prove their worthiness by cleaning up their act and demonstrating that their jobs entail more than chasing around stoned joyriders. When faced with the challenge of their careers, the Super Troopers must pull it together and the result is a comedy of errors. The film is rated R.

NEW YORK'S MOST CELEBRATED SYNAGOGUE

silvia lehrer's cooking column

What does a cooking teacher/food writer do when spending vacation time in a kitchen away from home? A kitchen that is indeed workable yet barely contains the basics. It is equipped with a modern flat surface electric stove, up-to-date refrigeration and enough counter space to prepare simple meals. Service for six, dinner plates, soup/cereal bowls, small salad plates, cups and saucers, and flatware is afforded along with four stainless steel, heavy bottom pots. The one skillet is a Dutch sauté, nice but hardly appropriate to scramble an egg or sauté without scorching. When I realized I needed a sturdy non-stick skillet to sauté a piece of fish or brown a piece of meat. East Hampton friends, Selma and Irwin Perton, who are vacationing in nearby North Miami Beach, came to the rescue.

Lorenzo's, a specialty Italian market, also in North Miami Beach, is the one reason to cook while I'm away. It is chock full of wonderful culinary specialties and their produce is first rate. I spied some plump veal meatballs in the meat refrigerator case. The veal is pre-seasoned with parsley, Parmesan, and egg and breadcrumbs by the chef (there is also a small restaurant in the middle of this large food emporium) and packaged for retail. All I had to do, I thought, was to pour over a can of tomatoes and season the way I usually would to sauce pasta. After browning the meatballs and simmering them in the tomato sauce I decided to serve the dish over cooked rice, rather than pasta, to sop up the delicious resulting juices.

The dish was good enough to serve to company and I prepared it again for my sister and family along with saganaki, a Greek cheese appetizer made with Kasserie cheese and poached strawberries in sugar syrup. Selma came to the rescue once again when she gave me a cup of sugar to prepare the berries. My practical side would simply not allow me to purchase a bag of sugar for the period of time I'm away. After all I'm supposed to be on vacation!

SAGANAKI

Susan Simm, consulting editor of Dan's Papers, spoke of this delicious Greek appetizer and I couldn't wait to try it. Here are my results.

Serves 6

4-5 plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced

1 pound Kasserie cheese
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/2-3/4 teaspoon dried oregano

1. Drop the tomatoes into a saucepan of boiling water for thirty seconds. Drain and cool under running water. Then slip off the skins with the point of a paring knife. Halve the tomatoes crosswise and gently squeeze out the seeds. Cut the tomatoes into small dice. Can be prepared ahead. Preheat broiler to high and adjust oven rack to three to four inches below element.

2. When ready to serve, cut the cheese into six wedges and arrange on a jellyroll pan. Pour the oil over the cheese and turn the pieces in the pan to coat. Sprinkle the cheese evenly with lemon juice and oregano and place under the broiler for two minutes. Slide out the pan and toss the tomatoes evenly around the partially melted cheese. Return to broiler and broil for another minute or two. With a spatula, scoop cheese and tomatoes, dividing them equally onto six salad plates and serve at once.

VEAL MEATBALLS IN TOMATO SAUCE

The package in the refrigerator case at Lorenzo's, a specialty Italian market in North Miami Beach, held 6 rounded and seasoned meatballs. I was inspired.

Serves 6

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
12 seasoned veal meatballs, about 2 1/2 pounds (seasoned with equal amounts parsley, Parmesan, egg and breadcrumbs)

For the sauce

2-3 shallots, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 can (2 pounds, 3 ounces) Italian plum tomatoes
1 1/2 tablespoons tomato paste
1/2 - 2/3 teaspoons dried oregano
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3-4 tablespoons chopped Italian parsley for garnish

Cooked rice for serving

1. Heat oil in a non-stick skillet and sauté the veal meatballs, in batches, until golden brown on both sides, about one to two minutes each side. Continue until all are done and transfer one layer deep to a large Dutch sauté or saucepan with a cover.

2. If necessary add and heat 1 tablespoon oil to the pan the meatballs cooked in and sauté shallots two to three minutes until translucent. Then add the garlic and sauté for a minute longer. Pour in the tomatoes and juice and tomato paste. Season with oregano, salt and pepper and bring to the edge of a boil. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

3. Pour the sauce over the meatballs and simmer, with cover ajar over medium-low heat, maintaining a lazy surface bubble, about 35-40 minutes until meat is cooked yet barely pink within. Serve over rice to sop up the delicious juices.

POACHED STRAWBERRIES IN SUGAR SYRUP

Dessert couldn't get any easier when I simply boiled up a little sugar and water with a wedge of lemon to cook a pint of plump strawberries. Drizzle it warm or room temperature over your favorite ice cream or gelato and joila!

Serves 6

1 pint fresh strawberries, hulled
1-1/2 cups water
2/3 cup sugar
1/2 lemon, rinsed
Hazelnut gelato or frozen vanilla yogurt

1. Hull and rinse strawberries. If very large cut in half lengthwise

2. Pour water into a medium saucepan and stir in the sugar to dissolve over medium heat. Bring to a boil then adjust heat to a brisk simmer. Squeeze the halved lemon into the liquid and drop in the lemon half. Simmer about twelve to fifteen minutes until liquid is syrupy and falls in a steady stream from a spoon. Put in the prepared strawberries and stir to mix. Cover and bring the liquid back to the boil then cook at a brisk simmer for two to three minutes until berries are softened. Can be prepared ahead to this point and refrigerated in a suitable container.

3. When ready to serve warm through in a small saucepan or serve at room temperature. Spoon over gelato or frozen yogurt.

Dining in The Hamptons

President's Day Weekend was quite a shock to the system – actual crowds! Yes, folks, the season's just around the corner. If you're into people watching, this is good news. So, where should you hang out if you want to check out the scene? Here are a few places you might expect to see some boldface names as the Hamptons start heating up: Look for the likes of Michael Douglas, Matt Dillon and Rosie Perez chowing sushi at posh Pacific East...At the legendary Laundry you might see Alan Alda, Chevy Chase or Billy Joel. Babette's sidewalk-side café tables have hosted Gwyneth Paltrow, Richard Gere and Venus and Serena Williams in the past...And of course there's the notorious star magnet Nick & Toni's, whose loyal clientele has included the Spielbergs, Donna Karan, Paul Simon and Mick Jagger.

Nesting? TV can provide some delicious inspiration. The next new episode of Eat at Joe's on LTV will feature guest chef Bryan Naylor from Your Gourmet Kitchen Planner. Naylor, along with guest host Valerie David, will prepare hickory and maple smoked Rouen duck with cherries tian and port wine reduction. The shows will air the week of March 4. The show airs on Mondays at 10 p.m., Tuesdays at 5 a.m., Wednesdays at 3:30 p.m., Fridays at 8:30 p.m. and Saturdays at 1:30 p.m. A new show is on each week. East Hampton's very own cooking show has gone national, by the way: you can now catch Eat at Joe's in Los Angeles and Greensboro, North Carolina, Manhattan, and Up Island markets Manhasset, Great Neck and Riverhead.

Did you know that Suki Zuki offers catering? Now that's a great dinner party idea.

Venturing out in search of some cozy winter atmosphere? Try a "fireside" table at one of these restaurants: the Laundry, Alison by the Beach, Mary Jane's, the American Hotel, the Ram's Head Inn, Rubi Red, Plaza Café, the Maidstone Arms, Rowdy Hall, Della Femina, the Farmhouse, Saracen.

Tierra Mar's next wine tasting event is called "Texas Game Dinner with Wild West Reds." It's on Saturday, March 2 at 7 p.m. and features a four-course dinner paired with wines for $65 per person plus tax and gratuity. Call 288-2700 for details.

Winter "steals & deals": Can't say it enough: this is the time to sample all of the East End's best restaurants (well, the ones that are open, that is). Café Amici is offering $5 off any entrée or pasta on Mondays and Tuesdays...The Maidstone Arms has a three course luncheon prix fixe for $16.50 Wednesday through Sunday...Mirko's has a prix fixe Thursday through Sunday...red/bar has two prix fixes: $22 for two courses and $25 for three courses. They will be offered Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday night all evening.

The Maidstone Arms and Boat, Bar & Bistro will close for winter vacation beginning Monday, February 25. Both restaurants will reopen on Wednesday March 6.

Restaurant web site update: www.Mirko's.com is a great website – it's beautifully designed. The menus are there, plus the wine list, lovely photos, reviews and more. www.maidstonearms.com is another good one: it has lots of information about this historic inn and restaurant.

The dish hears that....Alec Baldwin was spotted in the Water Room at the Maidstone Arms last week with an unknown guest snacking on zucchini chips.

HEALTH & FITNESS

So You Want To Be A Gold Medallist?

The 2006 Winter Olympics are just a few short years away, so if you have any aspirations of standing atop the podium in Italy, you should start training now. No more pizza at midnight, extended happy hours out at the bars and donuts for breakfast. If you want to be an Olympian you must think, eat and train like an Olympian – not just anyone gets on a Wheaties box.

The first thing you have to do is to choose a discipline in which to compete. You have to be rationale about this, if you're not an eight-year-old girl forget about figure skating. Rather tall? Short track speed skating will not be your cup of tea. Fear of high speeds? Think curling.

Having chosen a sport you are now ready to start training. This requires commitment; there are no weekend warriors at the Olympics. Daily training will not only help you increase your endurance, so you can handle the 30K cross-country ski race, but it will also help prevent injuries. Sporadic workouts will leave you feeling sore, while a regimented schedule will keep you in top form. Remember how the Olympics started, a Greek soldier ran twenty-five miles to report the news of a battle. He gave his report and then fell down dead. Clearly, he had not trained properly.

If you are one of the few people who is inclined to over-train, rather than under-train, you must be cautious not to injure yourself. If you're experiencing insomnia, loss of appetite, elevated morning pulse, an inability to finish workouts and a decrease in performance you may be training too hard. This can mean the difference between Olympic glory and a dismal eighteenth-place finish.

You are what you eat, from your head down to your feet. The average healthy person is hyper-conscious of their fat and calorie intake. This is true for you as well, but you must remember the amount that you are working out requires a sizable daily calorie intake and attention to the nutrients that your food is providing. Though they are the same shape, there is no relation between the Olympic Rings and donuts. You must ask yourself, "What is the best thing for me to eat right now?"

If you're goal is to take gold in the Men's Super G, then obviously skiing will consume a great deal of your training time. (It also helps to be Austrian for some reason.) Off the slopes you will be in the weight room, building both your upper and lower body strength to handle the g-forces you will encounter as you navigate turns at eighty mph. Tailor your regimen to meet your goals. And practice perfectly. Perfect form will become second nature.

You must always keep your goal in mind. A true Olympian will train every day with their eyes on the ultimate prize and a series of smaller goals will give them a sense of achievement and lead them ever closer to the top of the podium. If you are the couch-ridden future Olympian start slowly. Before too long you'll be strapping on the old brain bucket, standing at the top of a seventy degree pitch and heading for glory.

HEALTH & FITNESS

It's Not Running, It's Not Aerobics, But It's Exercise

The mid-winter months are known to crush workout aspirations. The New Years resolutions have faded and let's face it, you get bored of the same old gym routine. It is time to get innovative with your workouts. And it is much easier to motivate in a group exercise class than to motivate yourself. Workouts and exercise classes have come a long way since Jane Fonda in a pair of leg warmers.

Spin

Spinning has become one of the most talked about fitness trends in the past ten years. Spinning is known to burn up to 500 calories in an hour by alternating intervals of sprints and climbs on the stationary bike. One of the most appealing things about spinning is the music and the challenge of getting your legs cycling to the beat. Spinning classes were first the brainchild of eighties fitness guru Johnny G and it is now offered at most sports clubs around the country. Spinning is a great workout for beginners and experts because you control the level of your workout by increasing the resistance on the bike as your endurance improves. The Yoga Zone in East Hampton has a cult following for their classes on Saturday and Sunday mornings. Also in Sag Harbor Personal Best has classes that you must reserve spots for because they are so popular. Get you tail in gear and reserve you spot now!

Kickboxing

Kickboxing is a fun workout that is great for letting out all of your aggressions. Most kickboxing classes combine classic boxing moves, dance and traditional aerobics moves. Kickboxing is great for toning arms and abs as well as being a severe cardio workout. Kicks and punches are set to upbeat music and the work out is cleaner than Mike Tyson could ever hope for.

Yoga

Yoga has become readily accessible recently, which is good news for your body, because the benefits to your total wellness are endless. There are so many forms of Yoga, but the most common is Ashtanga Yoga which is a fluid series of poses and movements that will enhance your overall energy level and posture. Yoga builds lean muscle and improves flexibility. Hatha Yoga features slower movements and the focus is more on improving flexibility with Eastern stretching and breathing techniques. The Yoga Zone in East Hampton and Ananda Yoga in Southampton have classes daily. Bikram

Yoga in Bridgehampton just opened this fall and The Hayground School also has classes on weekends in the winter and every day in the summer.

Pilates

Pilates is the hottest exercise around. It has been the exercise of choice for ballerinas for years, advocated by ballet masters such as Martha Graham and George Balanchine. Traditional pilates uses a machine known as the "reformer" in which your body weight and tensioned springs supply the resistance in the exercise. Mat classes are now common at many gyms where the focus is on utilizing the body's central core (abdominal muscles and lower back) as the strength for all movements. Pilates builds lean muscles without the bulk that typical weight training tends to add to your body's frame. In Balance Pilates Studio (Sag Harbor) and Yoga Zone (East Hampton) offer mat classes daily. Private instructors also work out of studio in East Hampton and Sag Harbor. Try Don at 631-329-4420.

A Truly Exciting and Innovative Class

Circus Training: Have you ever had the urge to run out and join the circus? This class is offered at a few elite gyms around the country and combines circus-inspired aerobic workouts with large tigers and monkeys. Well, maybe the tigers won't be in every class but you will learn the skills needed to fly on a trapeze and tumble like a circus gymnast. This isn't offered on the East End yet, but stay tuned.

Tangled Up In Blue

The winter blues getting you down? Blue, our most serene of hues, is an inspiring shade that will brighten your home with simple elegance. From home cleaning products to couches to bed sheets, embrace your blue at home and the benefit will be a calming simplicity and overall balance.

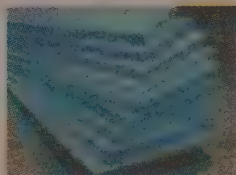

Hot Spring Spa Blue

The word "hydromassage" alone is enough to make sore muscles cry out for one of these spas. Hot water, room to stretch out, lumbar support and powerful jets in all the right spots will have you immersed in a virtual heaven that will erase any memories of grumpy bosses, hours in traffic or the kids' complaints. The high-impact, co-extruded thermoplastic shell will never delaminate and it can endure chemicals, body oils, bacteria and the sun without fading. Multi-level seating will allow everyone to find spots and cushioned headrests are positioned above every moto-massage jet so you can lay back and lounge in comfort. (Contact Ocean Spray Pools and Spas, Westhampton Beach, 631-288-6006, or Pools 2000, Deer Park, 631-243-3646 or www.hotspring.com)

Blue Dow Styrofoam Brand Insulation

With a large number of houses in various states of construction on the East End, you've undoubtedly seen a house post-framing and pre-siding wrapped in baby blue paneling. This is a styrofoam insulation made by Dow, which can save you money on heating and cooling costs in your home. The 3/8-inch thick paneling is impervious to moisture, reduces air infiltration into your home and prevents heat loss through the wood frame of your home, where 40% of heat loss occurs. This is one of those building materials that pays for itself and will increase the resale value of your home. Stay warm, stay cool, stay blue. (Contact Water Mill Lumber at 631-726-4493 or www.dow.com/styrofoam/)

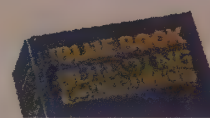

Blue Magic

Founded thirty years ago, Blue Magic began by making waterbed maintenance products and from those inauspicious beginnings it has grown into a manufacturer of a variety of products to help you care for automobiles, boats and recreational vehicles. Blue Magic Vinyl/Fiberglass Cleaner is specially formulated to clean, protect and preserve all vinyl and fiberglass surfaces. It's perfect for boat interiors, exteriors and covers, spa covers, inflatable rafts and kayaks and outdoor furniture. After you've finished cleaning, use Blue Magic Protectant to keep everything looking new. (www.bluemagic.com)

The Blue Book of Building and Construction

In an area that has some of the strictest building codes in the country, this web site is a boon for savvy homeowners and builders. Can you add a sunroom? Put dormers on the front of the house? These questions and more can be answered on this site by searching any region, which will provide building codes and regulations. For each region there is an extensive list of contractors and materials suppliers, so you can find out if a change is legal and then find someone to make the proposed changes. (www.thebluebook.com)

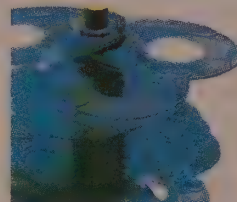

Ocean's Blue Foundation

The sky and sea are blue, so let's keep them that way. This Canadian group is focused on the "best practices" policy for the tourism industry, which aims to maintain and enhance environmental integrity in conjunction with tourism in coastal areas. Though the foundation is based in Canada, their message is particularly salient in our region. In a tourism driven community, the very features that attract tourists are the ones that must be protected the most actively. Tourism is one of the world's fastest growing industries and nature and adventure tourism are leading the way. In our current political and economic climate, people will be less likely to venture further afield, which translates into greater tourism on the East End. It also means we must be all the more vigilant about our local environment. (www.oceansblue.org)

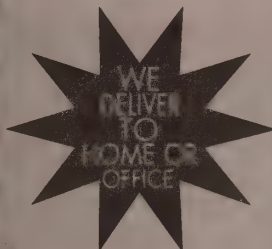

Music

Start with your music. Set the mood at home with some classic "blue" albums. Blue is a transcendent term in music, not only meaning sad and melancholy, but also referring to the qualities of the blue sky and the blue ocean – a classic inspiration for musicians and artists. Kind of Blue, Miles Davis, Blue Train, John Coltrane, Blue, Joni Mitchell, Way To Blue, An Introduction to Nick Drake, Nick Drake and Blue Gardenia, (Continued on next page)

Etta James are some classic blue titles. You can also create your own musical sculpture and organize your CD collection in the process, by getting the Toorn CD Tower designed by modernist Guglielmo Berchicci. The eighty-nine compartments fan out from a central column, which gives you freedom to mold the structure into different shapes. (The tower is available at MoMA design store and online at www.momastore.org.) If you prefer to keep your CDs the original case, Kartell has a snake like wall unit to shelve your discs. The S-shaped shelving is flexible and can be elevated and constructed into different formations. This also makes a great bookshelf and is an interesting wall adornment.

Kartell Ladder

To reach those tough, out-of-the-way spots around the house - why not step in style? From Kartell, this translucent-blue stepladder easily folds away and it will even look great when it is left out. The ladder comes in a two-step and a three-step model. (Kartell products are available at Turpan in East Hampton 631-324-2444, at Kartell in Soho or online at www.kartell.it)

A Blanket For All Seasons

For the bedroom, a simple white duvet can be wonderfully complimented with a pale-blue quilt or throw blanket to lighten your room. These are perfect for winter nights when you need the extra warmth, or great for just curling up in a chair to enjoy a book or video. Kitchen Aid Mixer

The latest addition to the Kitchen Aid Countertop Collection is a stylish line of radiant blue appliances that will brighten your countertop and add to your creativity in the kitchen. The classic pieces in the Kitchen Aid line have been updated including the legendary Stand Mixer. New gourmet appliances are also offered in the cobalt blue including the Pro Series Line of stovetops, hoods and ranges. (Kitchen Aid products are available at Bob Stevens in Westhampton Beach at their new location at Gabreski Airport, building 90, 631-288-3000)

Super Soap

If you are at home with some free time on your hands, take the chance to treat your skin right. This is the time of year that your skin starts to look especially peaked and (eek!) a bit pasty. Give yourself a boost. Eat some blueberries because they are rich in antioxidants and Vitamin C, which add to the skin's vitality. Also Kiehl's has a great Blue Astringent Herbal Lotion that balances and rejuvenates uneven skin. And for the ultimate close shave, try the Brushless White Eagle Shave Cream. Also, the winter is the perfect time for a leisurely soak in a warm bubble bath. Try Kiehl's Eucalyptus Bath Gel and escape your active life and enjoy this aromatic retreat. Have some fun in the bath with Not Soap Radio: (remember the old joke?) which comes in a rainbow of colors including a vibrant blue. (Call Second Nature in Southampton at 631-283-8117 or East Hampton at 631-324-5257 or Saks Fifth Avenue)

Keep It Clean

And as spring cleaning approaches lets not forget the most multi-purposeful blue solution - Windex. Windex is the perfect cleaning agent, great for windows, tabletops and bathrooms. Stock up on the Windex and take advantage of the indoor days to catch up on some house cleaning because spring is right around the corner. (King Kullen, Bridgehampton)

Cocktails

At your next cocktail party, entice your guests with some cool indigo cocktails. Some really blue drinks can be mixed with just a few simple ingredients. Mix up a round of Papa Smurfs: Combine 1 part Skyy Vodka, 1 part peach schnapps, 1 part pineapple, a splash of triple sec and a splash of lime juice. Shake and serve over ice in a rocks glass. Or make some bubbly Sapphire Sensations: Mix 1 part blue curaçao with 4 parts champagne and finish with a splash of lemon juice.

Tiffany's has some icy blue bar tumblers that can be filled with some gin and tonics or beer. Blue glass can look really beautiful and the effect of mixing some indigo shades with your usual barware is uber-cool. Stock up on some classics: Bombay Sapphire, Skyy Vodka, Blue Heron Ale and Blue Curaçao. (Tiffany's coming soon to East Hampton!)

Fornasetti Umbrella Stand

April showers are coming soon, and it is a nice idea to brighten up your foyer with a groovy stand for people to put their wet umbrellas. No one really wants dirty rainwater tracked all over the house. Having a simple splash of color in the entrance of your home makes a statement of style. (A great looking umbrella stand designed by Fornasetti is available at www.frauantiques.com. Also visit Hildreth's in Bridgehampton, Southampton and East Hampton for other ideas. 631-283-2300)

Art

Blue hues used in painting are interesting because of their depth and diversity. Many painters also look at nature's color palette when they paint the sky and the sea. Both are constantly changing and it is nice to bring some of the outside into your home. Some classic paintings that are a homage to the color are: Mark Rothko's "Blue, Green, Blue on Blue Ground," Vincent Van Gogh's "The Starry Night," Henri Matisse's "Icarus from Jazz," "Blue Nude," Joseph Albers' "Homage to a Square," Joan Miro's "Blue," and Pablo Picasso's "Blue Room."

Dan's Papers 1st Annual Pizza Essay Contest

Dan's Papers is in search of the best pizza on the East End. Rather than go out and eat pizza until we can't see straight, we have decided to call upon our readers to help us in the search. We are accepting submissions, prose or poetry, forty words or less, about your favorite spot for pizza on the East End. Write about the cheese, ruminate on the crust, just keep it short and sweet. The best essays will be published in the paper and the winner will receive a pizza from the restaurant they have immortalized in print. Dan himself will deliver the pizza to the winner's home. Entries should be mailed to: Pizza Contest, Dan's Papers, P.O. Box 630, Bridgehampton NY. 11932. Or emailed to: editor@danspapers.com before midnight, March 24, 2002. The winner will be announced in our April 5 issue, with delivery arrangements made at that time.

POLICE BLOTTER

Have you ever shut off the water in your summer home and then realized you had to go real, real bad? Me too... A Manhattan resident found himself in a somewhat similar situation, only it was someone else that nature had called upon. The 62-year-old 79th street resident was returning to his Red Dirt Road summertime abode in East Hampton when he discovered a broken basement window. He told police on Saturday that sometime between December 20 and February 23 an unknown terdburglar had gained entry to his home by breaking a window and then went upstairs to use the bathroom. The only thing missing was the ability to flush the toilet.

An ironic connection surfaced in Amagansett when a Main Street resident reported a burglary at his home. The 61-year-old man told police that fifteen rolls of toilet paper, ten rolls of paper towels and 5 containers of VO5 shampoo, collectively valued at $100, were stolen from 4 bathrooms and a closet in his home. The products of paper caper took place sometime between 3p.m. on Friday and 3p.m. on Saturday.

More sick and perverted crimes were reported in Noyac last week when, for the I-don't-know-how-manieth time since last Summer, a flasher, fitting the same description of those in the past, was spotted on Middle Line Highway near Noyac Path. Reports said that a woman from Hidden Cove Court was jogging in the early afternoon on February 16 when a man leapt from the woods bearing it all and acting in a manner not suitable for daytime television. Again, the freaky flasher was described as a white male with black hair standing about six feet, two inches tall. The woman told police that he was wearing only a multi-colored sweater.

This just in... The freaky flasher makes more inappropriate public appearances than Geraldo Rivera! Two women out for an early morning walk on Ocean Avenue in East Hampton were surprised and disgusted when they came around a bend to the sight of sin. A man fitting the usual description jumped out of the bushes and performed like a 58-year-old chimp who's been locked up in a petting zoo for forty years. The only questions that now remain are "What is this man's name?" and, "Do the drapes match the carpet?"

In more appropriate news this week, employees of the Calypso shop in East Hampton called police on Saturday to report the theft of two bottles of perfume. Police are on the lookout in East Hampton for a blonde and a brunette in their teens who smell like forty-dollar perfume... shouldn't be too hard, right?

A jewelry heist in Springs last week left an Isle Of Wight resident in a lagoon of darkness after $8,000 worth of watches was stolen from a loft in his house. He told police that it happened sometime between August 23 and December 2001.

As beautiful and placid as Southampton seems, one might be alarmed at the hardened criminals whom pass through its borders each day. For instance, two men entered a local hardware store on Montauk Highway last Wednesday and, instead of going for the safe or the cash register, they walked out the door with a tube of epoxy. This is one crime that will stick in my mind for a long time.

Xanax and Zoloft... Sounds like two crewmen aboard the starship Enterprise... But actually they were pills stolen from a woman who later told police to drop the case. It seems she wasn't too anxious to get her medication back.

Dan's LETTERS

EENY, MEANY, MINY... WOOLCO

Dear Dan,

In regard to whether Grant's existed in Bridgehampton, you were right to believe that Grant's was in Bridgehampton, because my parents (and most of the Hamptons area) shopped there. It did, however, close in the late 70's replaced by Woolco. Caldor, which was replaced by K-Mart, replaced Woolco, which whoever will replace wants to roll the dice and risk future bankruptcy.

So, in response to Mr. Corey's letter, yes there was a Grant's in Bridgehampton, however it was there before the Woolco was, and not vice versa as you had said. This would agree with the dates that Mr. Corey mentioned in his letter.

GREEN IS GOOD

Dear Dan,

Yes, I have seen it too. It was on a cruise in Alaska. Rumor had it, if you are lucky, you will see the Green Flash. It was about 10 p.m. on a beautiful night in June. There in a flash, I had the notion to go out onto the deck and just look. Sure enough, this incredible vision appeared and the sun was green. Just for a moment though. If you turned your head, you were out of luck. It is, as my mother, Rosie, used to say, "as sight to behold."

Thanks for being you Dan. I can count on you to stir my imagination and my memory, recalling pleasures I have had and ones to anticipate.

I am living in RoughRiders, Montauk, and one year and passionately in love with what it has to offer.

TV OR NOT TV

Dear Dan,

There is in my opinion, an unwritten "gentlemen's agreement" in the Town of Southampton and some other towns on the East End that monopolies should be protected at all costs, and that leaders can turn their backs on the people if there is money to be made by business — that the money of business is more important than taxpayer's money.

I would like to reiterate the financial picture of the entire cable TV industry — how breaches of contract are rampant by Cablevision throughout the East End, Long Island, the State of New York and in the United States. The Cablevision problem could shed light on the merit of the emerging satellite industry, which has the potential for fierce competition. One of these issues is the rising costs of rates soaring to seven percent, the displacement and dissolution of public access and services, and the company's withholding of gross receipts of not only the cable services, but also of the internet modem sales, that could be assessed by the towns to ease the burden on taxpayers. Since government deregulation of the cable TV industry, the companies have put money, greed and power above the needs of the viewers and the communities, which these cable companies are supposed to serve. I think it is newsworthy how the little town of Riverhead, population 25,000, is standing up to the giant Cablevision. Recently a precedent was set when Cablevision was sued and removed by the town of Brunswick, Ohio, for breaches of contract. The town won a settlement of $500,000.

Our town can do the same. In fact the two extra public access channels that we are supposed to have worth $15 to $30 million. If Cablevision does not clear up its breaches by March 27, the Town could make public access rich and create a surplus for much needed basic town improvements, like roads, for example.

Supervisor Bob Kozakiewicz of Riverhead leads the way for the East End, even though other town leaders have compromised themselves to the monopolies. He should not allow himself to be bullied by the likes of Cablevision, its cronies and the Old Boy's Club that makes very ungentlemanly agreements, because he has more clout, than he realizes — the clout of the truth of the people whom he represents.
